

From the desk of
Dan Miller
Publisher
dmiller@heartland.org

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

The Heartland Institute expects more than 1,000 people, including scores of media representatives, to attend the second International Conference on Climate Change next month in New York.

I am writing to invite you as my guest to a dinner February 25 in Chicago with one of the key speakers at the conference, Dr. Fred Goldberg, who will give us a preview of his presentation the following week in New York.

The dinner is complimentary. No sales pitch. No donation. Just a chance to hear one of the world's leading climate scientists explain why global warming has not reached crisis proportions, and the role human activity may play or not play in climate change.

Fred is an associate professor at the Royal Institute of Technology in Stockholm and an authority on polar history and exploration. He has been invited to lecture at more than a dozen universities around the world and has been published in more than 12 languages.

He's an articulate, extremely knowledgeable scientist who is helping Heartland ask the question that is the theme of the New York conference: "Global Warming: Was it every really a crisis?"

We'll meet Wednesday, February 25 at Petterino's, 150 North Dearborn at Randolph. We will gather at 5:30 p.m., sit down for dinner at 6 p.m., and adjourn by 7:30.

Seating is very limited for this dinner. Please let me know by Friday, February 20 whether you can join Dr. Goldberg and me. I can be reached at 312/377-4000, email dmiller@heartland.org.

I hope you will join us.
